About the museum

The castle tower in Dunaföldvár is a four-storey rectangular late-Gothic style building dating back to the beginning of the XVI. century. There are only few resources left about it, most important is the description of Turkish traveller Evlia Cselebi stating that it was connected to a mosque of Sultan Suleiman and that four cannons were placed at the highest floor of the tower. After the Turkish-era, the castle tower was converted into a prison. Nowadays the Turkish or Unfinished (Csonka) tower contains a museum exhibition about Kuruc freedom fighters.
